Get a round stick—part of a curtain rod will do—measuring about twenty-one inches in length and about an inch in diameter. Make a hole with a gimlet at each end and screw in a little brass knob to finish it off prettily. Enamel the rest of the stick and, when dry, pass it under the flap of the holder and secure it to the back of the pocket with straps of linen.

Finally, add the cord and tassels across the top, which should agree with the ball fringe in color. The make of this pocket is so simple that no further explanation should be necessary.

The STATE JOURNAL's Want and Miscellaneous columns reach each working day in the week more than twice as many Topeka people as can be reached through any other paper. This is a fact. One word describes it—"perfection." We refer to De Witt's Little Early Riser, cures obstinate sores, burns, skin diseases and is a well known cure for piles. J. K. Jones.

For instance, Mrs. Clara Rogers, of Bay City, Mich., accidentally spilled scalding water over her little boy. She promptly applied De Witt's Little Early Riser, giving instant relief. It's a wonderfully good salve for burns, bruises, sores, and a sure cure for Piles. J. K. Jones.

TABLE ETIQUETTE.

CHILDREN should be taught to drink as little as possible while eating.

Fruit is not to be bitten; it should be peeled and cut with a fruit knife.

Never drum with the fingers upon the table—or with the feet upon the floor.

"BETTER is a dinner of herbs where love is, than a stalled ox and hatred therewith."

No GENTLEMAN will ever place his arms upon the table, either before, during or after a meal.

MEATS are to be cut with a single gliding movement of the knife, not by converting it into a saw.

KEEP the elbows always close to the side, no matter how ample may be the room between guests.

NEVER hurry the dinner; let everything come along promptly on time, and move steadily thereafter.

ICED oysters or clams are to be eaten with lemon juice dropped over—never with salt and pepper.

BE punctual—to keep a dinner party waiting under any circumstances is the gravest social indiscretion.

TAKE soup only from the side of the spoon—unless wearing a mustache; never sip it with an audible sound.

NEVER play with knife and fork, or other table utensils; do not touch them at all, except when about to use them.

UN lives longest and most safely who at dinner and elsewhere turns down his glasses and "tastes not the cup."

IN an accident of any kind should occur during the dinner, do not seem to notice it—unless help may be quietly given.

FISH is to be taken with a fork only; it should be carried to the mouth, with the tines of the fork pointing downward.—Good Housekeeping.

BAG FOR NEWSPAPERS.

So Simple That Any Ingenious Woman Can Make One.

The pretty pocket illustrated resembles a large envelope in appearance, the flap serving to preserve the contents from the dust, which, as everybody knows, is very apt to collect among unbound papers. For the foundation of the pocket, cut a piece of buckram to seventeen inches in width and twenty-one inches in length. Cut off the corners at one end to the depth of seven inches to shape the flap, and fold up six inches at the other end, to make the pocket.

Now prepare the cover. Colored linen is a good material to use, being both pretty and durable, but it is quite possible to make a charming case of coarse canvas, embroidered in cross-stitch with a thick make of cotton. Cut the linen the same shape as the buckram, but half an inch larger all round.

If white or colored flax thread is used for this purpose there are many of the Mountmellick stitches which would have a very good effect—cross-stitch, for instance, would serve for outlines; Indian filling for the leaves, and feather-stitch for the stems. The letters may be traced out with fine cord. Another plan is to paint the design and to outline it with gold.

The decorated linen should then be stretched over the buckram which is next lined with satin, or something of the sort, to suit the color of the linen. Bring the raw edges of the lining over to the right side of the pouch and sew them down. Sew up the sides of the pocket firmly and border the whole of the front of both pocket and flap with ball fringe, which should, if possible, combine the colors of the embroidery with that of the linen.

Get a round stick—part of a curtain rod will do—measuring about twenty-one inches in length and about an inch in diameter. Make a hole with a gimlet at each end and screw in a little brass knob to finish it off prettily. Enamel the rest of the stick and, when dry, pass it under the flap of the holder and secure it to the back of the pocket with straps of linen.

Finally, add the cord and tassels across the top, which should agree with the ball fringe in color. The make of this pocket is so simple that no further explanation should be necessary.

How to Repair Mirrors.

For repairing mirrors accidentally scratched clean the bare portion of the glass by rubbing it gently with fine cotton, taking care to remove any traces of dust and grease. If this cleaning is not done very carefully, defects will appear around the place repaired. With a point of a knife cut upon the back of another looking glass a portion of the silvering of the required form, but a little larger. Upon it place a drop of mercury—a drop the size of a pin's head will be sufficient for a surface equal to the size of a nail. The mercury spreads immediately, penetrates the amalgam to where it was cut off with the knife, and the required piece may now be lifted and removed to the place to be repaired. This is the most difficult part of the operation. Then press lightly the renewed portions with cotton and the glass presents the same appearance as when new.

Removing Labels from Bottles.

Where good paste has been used it is often difficult to remove a label from a bottle. If the label be thoroughly soaked with water, and then held for a moment over a gas-flame, the paper will be loosened by the steam thus formed, and can be stripped off without trouble.

Why Women Want the Vote.

I, as a woman, want the vote because—

I am a citizen equally with men.

I have to obey the laws and am not exempt from any penalty for breaking them. I ought in fairness to share all the privileges too.

If I pay taxes, I ought to have a voice in the spending of the public money.

It is the essence of slavery for one set of adult human beings to be ruled absolutely by another set. Slavery is bad for both master and slave.

The stigma of inferiority I bear in common with idiots, criminals, paupers, lunatics and children is degrading and intolerable.

It is my duty to care for national morality and to have power to influence public action for good.

It is my duty to help my sister women who suffer from the present laws relating to labor, marriage, divorce, property, etc.

The women's vote will be the most powerful aid to temperance legislation.

Women do much for the state industrially, intellectually and especially as good mothers, and so deserve freedom and equality.—Mrs. M. Walters in Woman's Signal.

Miss Alice Azeez.

An Arab princess, Miss Alice Azeez, who is to enter the Harvard annex this fall, says that in her own country men are not allowed to write until they can add a long chain of titles to their names. Women are not expected to write for publication, but she hopes to secure this privilege when she has obtained the titles from American and English universities. Then she expects to found a magnificent library which will become a monument to her father. She then proposes to give her life to the amelioration of the women of her race in the orient, and the public library is to become a part of the school system of the country. Miss Azeez has been living in retirement in Brooklyn for some time. She is only 19 years of age, but understands the Arabian, Assyrian, Grecian, Latin, French, German and English languages. Specimens of her needlework adorn the shelves of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York and the Peabody museum at Cambridge, Mass.

The Dean of Bryn Mawr.

The dean of Bryn Mawr is one of the youngest of the notables in the educational world, having been only 37 when she accepted her present responsibility but a few years ago. She is Miss M. Carey Thomas by name, and in appearance strongly resembles Mrs. Kendal, the actress. In fact, she has lived so much in England and is evidently so great an admirer of English "ways and means" that she might easily be mistaken for a daughter of Britain. She parts her reddish brown hair over the broadest and whitest of foreheads, gowns herself in severe serges and heavy silks and speaks with the very latest London drawl. Her own particular abode in the Bryn Mawr settlement is a charming little graystone affair, known as "The Denery." Here Miss Thomas entertains her many artistic and literary friends, who, upon her "evenings," flock to her from Philadelphia. She has a close and admiring intimate in Agnes Repplier, the clever essayist.

A Popular Teacher.

"Miss Jordan rules our roost," once remarked a Smith college girl in an expansive mood. "She is our head professor of literature and rhetoric, and what she doesn't know on those subjects isn't worth knowing. She was the brightest member of the brightest class that was ever graduated from Vassar. All you have to do in Miss Jordan's classes is to simply sit there and watch her scintillate. It really gets rather tiresome toward your senior year. She's so bewilderingly brilliant that you find yourself catching your breath every now and then and wondering whether she can keep it up. What does she look like? Oh, she's a little mite of a woman, with her hair screwed up on top of her head and a red shawl generally fastened about her shoulders, but she has the most magnetic voice I ever listened to and the kind of manner that makes you feel as if mere inches didn't count for much after all. The girls just worship her."

A Woman Recruiting Officer.

What do you say to a woman recruiting sergeant? There is one in England. This sergeant wears no uniform, flaunts no ribbons, waits at no public house—is, in fact, a lady. Miss Gould has for many years been known for her work among the criminal poor of London and has lately turned her attention to young thieves. Having once got hold of them, she never feels safe about them until they have accepted the queen's shilling. The reason she gives is worth noting. It is not so much the industry and discipline as the severe way theft is punished among the soldiers themselves. Everything in the army has to be paid for, and money is scarce. A detected thief is not usually reported, but when night comes he and a riding whip make the most intimate acquaintance. If other good workers in the same line follow Miss Gould, a knotty question will be solved.—Leeds (England) Mercury.

Delay, Not Defeat.

From the headquarters of the New York woman suffrage campaign committee, in Rochester, comes a strong and eloquent address to the friends of equal franchise, signed by the chairman, Mrs. Jean Brooks Greenleaf. Among the active measures called for by this document is the taking up of the petition work again, this time for the legislature. The affirmative vote of two successive legislatures will bring the question to the ballot box, where the convention refused to place it. The 97 who imagined that, at the very least, they had relegated the matter to the year 1914, when the next constitutional convention meets, have simply made a failure.—Scranton (Pa.) Truth.

THE FASHION PLATE.

The latest moires are as soft and pliable as undressed silk.

"Lisaine" is the name of a new rain-proof seal for capes, cloaks and jackets.

The large "granny" bonnet is the latest head covering for maidens from 3 to 8 years of age.

Some of the new golf capes lined with plaided satin or surah have hoods made of other fur lined with tartan.

There is again a rage for jet garnitures on hats, entire costumes, wraps, fancy waists and evening bonnets.

The ribbed, shot, plaided and striped fancy velvets have become so fashionable that a very large importation is exhibited this season.

The new golf cloth is double faced and has a surface of dark rich colored cloth, with the reverse side showing tartans in a variety of clan patterns.

Among the effective materials for evening toilets are the Vienna satin brocades shot in yellow and white, mauve and white, rose color and white and other tints soft and delightful to the eye.

Golden yellow, imperial purple, "reine" pink and Jacqueminot red velvets are used for French evening bonnets in combination with jet, lace, fur, birds, costly metal woven satin ribbons, perler and iridescent bead passementeries, aigrets and plumes.—New York Post.

RAILROAD TIES.

The busiest railroad station in the world is Waterloo, London.

There are 5,466 railway surgeons employed by the railroads of the United States and Canada.

A granite boulder of 2,000 cubic meters and 120 feet in height was moved to make way for the Mexican Central railroad bed.

A new road is to be constructed that will join Pittsburg and the Beech Creek railroad. Capital to build the line will be furnished by Philadelphia and Pittsburg capitalists.

KNEW NEITHER.

A Reporter Has an Experience With an English Visitor.

A few evenings ago there chanced to be a distinguished visitor from the British Isles at one of the Washington hotels, and to him the reporter sent up his card, putting his name just over the paper he represented, thinking the juxtaposition would establish the connection between the two with sufficient clearness. It has always done so with American victims. The bellboy who took the card carried long—in fact, he stayed so long that a second boy was sent after the first, to see what caused the delay. In a little while down came both, No. 1 bringing the information that the tourist said he didn't know either one of the gentlemen, and begged to be excused.

Then the boy explained that the guest on being handed the card gazed at it awhile in silence, and finally went to his trunk and hauled out a book. For some minutes he hunted for the name of the reporter in his list of acquaintances, and then he began running through the P's, thinking it possible he must have met a Mr. Post somewhere in his travels. As his search wasn't successful in either case he got a second book and went through that with a similar result. That was why the bellboy tried the reporter's patience and that was why the message came that "he didn't know either one of the gentlemen."
